

You're the tale-spinner!

You've always felt the life is in the details, the personalities, the events; without them, everything seems so much more boring.

What matters most is the story. When you enter the Museum, it's like opening a book!

FOOD on 1 East

1961

“Every woman should have a blowtorch.”

Star-Spangled Banner: born in a brewery!

Who am I, and who is my mother? Find out in...

The Star-Spangled Banner on 2 Center

1813

“The flag being so very large, mother was obliged to obtain permission from the proprietors of Claggetts brewery which was in our neighborhood,...and I remember seeing my mother down on the floor, placing the stars.”

In 1869, Americans put gold back in the ground.

“By arrangement with W. H. Hibbard Esq., superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Company, a wire was attached to the gold spike so that when it was struck by Gov. Stanford, that instant the electric spark communicated with the cities east and west, and announced that the work was done.”

— Salt Lake Telegram May 11, 1869

1869

What is this spike? Why are all these people celebrating?

A Change Goin' Come

“A: From my own point of view, before going to college, we had talked about doing sit-in-type things... What led us, I guess, in acting that particular night was that we met, we talked, and we discussed the need to do something...”

Q: What were your feelings as you sat there in the store?

A: Intense sense of pride, a bit of trepidation.”
– Joe McNeil, 1979

...A lot of water's gone across the dam
Since we put make-up on for Uncle Sam
To treat you as our fathers treated you then
We were drafted by our president
And we march with banners unfurled
We were drilled and trained to represent
The greatest army in the world
Yes the greatest army of actors in the world!
– Irving Berlin, 1943
